

Laurence Ball is Professor of Economics at Johns Hopkins University, a Research Associate of the National Bureau of Economic Research and a Visiting Scholar at the International Monetary Fund. His research focuses on unemployment, inflation, and fiscal and monetary policy, and he is the author of Money, Banking, and Financial Markets (Worth Publishers, 2012).

Rodolphe Blavy is Deputy Director of the European Offices of the IMF. During his Fund career, he has covered key policy issues for emerging markets and has been involved in the negotiation and monitoring of Fund-supported programs. Prior to his career at the Fund, Mr. Blavy worked at Lehman Brothers as a derivatives trader and at J.P. Morgan as an M&A analyst.

Nauro Campos is Professor of Economics and Finance at Brunel University London, a Research Professor at ETH Zürich and a Research Fellow at the Institute for the Study of Labor (IZA). He is the co-author, with Jeff Nugent, of a major study on the impacts of labor market regulations on growth and inequality, and he has edited a special issue of Economic Systems.

Jean-Bernard Chatelain is Professor in Economics & Finance, Member of Institut Universitaire de France, Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne. His areas of interest are money & banking, financial macroeconomics, growth and finance, and micro econometrics of corporate investment and of corporate finance.

Mai Dao is an economist in the IMF's Research Department. She co-authored the background paper for the 2010 ILO-IMF Oslo Conference on "The Challenges of Growth, Employment and Social Cohesion." Her work on labor markets has appeared in Journal of International Economics, Oxford Economic Papers and Review of Economics and Statistics.

Nathalie Gonzalez Prieto is a research economist in the IMF-DFID program. Her recent work is on fiscal policy and labor markets in low-income economies and on links between jobs and growth in low-income economies.

Bruno Crépon is a researcher at Centre de Recherche en Économie et Statistique (CREST) and an Associate Professor at ENSAE and École Polytechnique. The focus of his research is on policy evaluation with special attention to labor market policies. He is a Co-Chair of the Labor Markets sector and a member of J-PAL's executive committee.

Anda David is a research officer at the AFD with interests in migration and other labor market issues and aid. Her dissertation studied migration and employment interactions for MENA countries.

Sabina Dewan is president and executive director of the JustJobs Network (JJN), which she co-founded with John Podesta in 2013. Her research focuses on the role of quality employment in building equitable economies around the globe. She has published on a range of economic issues, from the impact of trade and globalization on employment to the nexus of renewable energy and job creation.

Romain Duval is an advisor in the IMF's Research Department, where he leads the agenda on jobs, growth and structural reforms. He has published widely in academic and policy-oriented journals on structural reforms, growth, unemployment, the political economy of reforms, business cycles, monetary policy, exchange rates, and climate change.

Karim El Aynaoui is Managing Director of OCP Policy Center, a global think tank headquartered in Rabat. Previously, he was Director of Economics at Bank Al-Maghrib (the central bank of Morocco) and an economist at the World Bank. He is the author of a book on growth strategies for Morocco and the guest editor of a special issue of Oxford Economic Papers.

Ekkehard Ernst is Chief of the Job-friendly Macroeconomic Policies Unit at the International Labor Organization, which produces the World Employment and Social Outlook, the ILO's annual flagship publication. Before joining the ILO in 2008, he worked at the OECD and the European Central Bank.

Veronica Escudero works at the International Labor Organization. Her fields of specialization are Development Economics, Labor Economics and International Economics.

Francois Facchini is a Professor at the Université de Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne. His fields of specialization are Labor Economics, International Economics and Development Economics.

Davide Furceri is a senior economist in the IMF's Research Department. He previously worked as an economist at the European Central Bank and at the OECD. He has published extensively in academic journals in the area of macroeconomics, public finance and international macroeconomics.

Tayeb Ghazi is a researcher at the OCP Policy Center with interests in labor markets, trade and development. His recent work focuses on relationship between jobs and growth in low-income countries.

Yi Huang is assistant professor in international economics (Pictet Chair) at the Graduate Institute, Geneva, with research interests at the intersection of international macroeconomics and finance. He has been a Visiting research fellow at the Hong Kong Institute for Monetary Research and a member of World Economic Forum's council on global economic imbalances.

Aomar Ibourk, is a professor of quantitative methods and social economics at the Cadi Ayyad University in Marrakech and the director of GRES (Economic and Social Research Group). His research focuses on econometric methodologies applied to social sciences (labor economics, economics of education and development).

Martin Kahanec is Professor at the Central European University in Budapest; co-founder of CELSI, Bratislava; visiting research fellow at Harvard University's Labor and Worklife Program; and affiliated scholar at Centre for Population, Development and Labour Economics (POP). He is the founding Managing Editor of the IZA Journal of European Labor Studies.

Ekaterina Kalugina is an assistant professor at Université d'Évry-Val-d'Essonne and an associate at the Centre d'Etudes des Politiques Economiques.

Prakash Loungani is Chief of Development Macroeconomics in the IMF's Research Department. During 2010-15 he co-chaired the IMF's group on Jobs and Growth. He has edited special issues of the Journal of Money, Credit and Banking, the Journal of International Money and Finance, and the International Journal of Forecasting.

Giovanni Melina is an economist in the IMF's Research Department, an Associate Professor in Macroeconomics (on leave) at City University London and an affiliate at , CESifo. His research fields are macroeconomics (fiscal and monetary policies, DSGE models) and applied econometrics.

Amal Miftah is associate researcher at Paris-Dauphine University with research interests in international economics and development economics. His dissertation work was on the impact of international migration on Moroccan economy.

Amine Ouazad is an associate professor of economics at Ecole Polytechnique with research interests in urban economics, the economics of education, econometrics, and microeconomic theory. His research has appeared in the Review of Economics and Statistics, Journal of Economic Theory and Journal of Public Economics.

Aurelio Parisotto is Head of the Country Policy Development and Coordination Unit in the Employment Policy Department at the ILO. An ILO official since 1994, Mr. Parisotto worked also at UNCTAD and at the International Institute for Labour Studies in Geneva. He was a member of the technical secretariat of the World Commission on the Social Dimension of Globalization in 2002-2004.

Manasa Patnam is an Assistant Professor at CREST-ENSAE with papers on various development issues that have appeared in Journal of Development Economics and other outlets. Her research focuses on the economics of social interactions and spillovers.

Francesco Saraceno is deputy department director at OFCE Sciences-Po. His main research interests include the relationship between inequality and macroeconomic performance, European macroeconomic policies, and the interaction between structural reforms and fiscal and monetary policies. He maintains a popular blog, “Sparse Thoughts of a Gloomy European Economist”.

Haje Schütte is head of the Development Finance division at the OECD. Previously, he held senior positions at the KfW Development Bank, holding responsibility for the bank’s financial sector activities, and as a project manager at the ILO.

Cyrille Schweltnus is senior economist at the OECD with research interests in international economics, macroeconomics and public economics.

Willi Semmler is Arnhold Professor of International Cooperation and Development at the New School for Social Research. His research and teaching interests are: Empirical Macroeconomics, Macroeconomics of the US and EU, Financial Markets, Economics of Climate Change, Business Cycles and Macro Dynamics.

Ahmed Tritah is an Associate Professor at the Université du Maine (Le Mans, France). He was previously a research economist at CEPII (Paris) and Jean Monet research fellow at the Robert Schumann Center for Advanced Studies at European University Institute.

Alessandro Turrini is Head of Labour Market Reforms Unit at the European Commission (DG-ECFIN), which publishes "Labour Market Developments in Europe". Before joining the EC, he taught at the University of Bergamo and Bocconi University. He joined IZA as a Policy Fellow in 2012.

Sebastian Weber is an economist at the ECB with research interests in exchange rates issues, monetary policy, development and labor markets. His work has been published in the Journal of Development Economics, the Journal of African Economies, and International Finance.

Karen E. Wilson as worked in the Structural Policy Division of the Science, Technology and Industry Directorate at the OECD since 2009. She served at the Kauffman Foundation from 2008-2012 and has been affiliated with Bruegel since 2012. She is an Associate Fellow at the Said Business School at Oxford University and a Visiting Lecturer at the Stockholm School of Economics in Riga. Karen is the founder of GV Partners, a research and consulting firm she created in 2004.

Nawal Zaaj is at the Higher Council of Scientific Research (Morocco) with research interests in labor market and migration issues.